DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-6 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S.

Patent 4,930,504 to Diamantopoulos et al. Diamantopoulos et al. teach a device for biostimulation of tissue (abstract) using a cluster probe with multiple LEDs (array). Ten 880 nm LEDs are positioned around the circumference and additional LEDs of other wavelengths (i.e. 660 nm) are positioned within the circle of 880 nm LEDs. The LEDs may be uniformly dispersed (Fig. 7). The different wavelengths of LEDs are broadly interpreted as separate arrays. Control circuits are provided to power the arrays (Fig. 4). The visible wavelength LEDs (660 nm) can be used as a targeting mechanism as they illuminate the target area and are coupled to the array as they are integral to the probe. The handle of the probe provides a positioning capability and is interpreted as a positioning device. Regarding the interpretations of targeting and positioning, "During examination, the claims must be interpreted as broadly as their terms reasonably allow. This means that the words of the claim must be given their plain meaning unless applicant has provided a clear definition in the specification" (MPEP § 2111.01). Clear definition must not be confused with specific limitations.

Regarding claim 11, the method of use of the Diamantopoulos et al. device is inherent in its structure. Arrays of LEDs are provided with specific wavelengths with the intended use of irradiating a tissue area. The device must be positioned to accomplish this use (Col. 9, line 64 to Col. 10, line 19).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 7, 8 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent 4,930,504 to Diamantopoulos et al. in view of U.S. Patent 5,860,967 to Zavislan et al. Diamantopoulos et al. is discussed above, but does not disclose imaging of a treated area. Zavislan et al disclose a handheld irradiation device that includes a CCD in the handpiece for imaging the treated area (abstract). Zavislan et al teach the need for a visualization system for tissue such as skin and other non-ocular tissue (Col. 2, lines 5-8). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the imaging device of Zavislan et al in the invention of Diamantopoulos et al. to solve the problem of imaging of skin as disclosed by Zavislan et al. The control circuitry of Diamantopoulos et al. is capable of controlling (beam control logic) the target visible light as required in claim 10.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claim 9 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

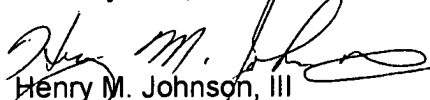

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. DE 3837248 A1 to Teichmann et al. discloses a device for treating skin lesions with an imaging capability.
